The World Championships

By Jared Johnson
ScoreCard Editor

Russia's loss is America's gain. No, we're not talking about any remnants of Cold War rivalry or current geopolitics. The 2010 World Bridge Championships, originally scheduled for St. Petersburg, Russia, have been rescheduled for Philadelphia, October 1-16, 2010.

It will have been 16 years since the last World Bridge Championships in the United States. Albuquerque scored a coup by snagging the championships in 1994. Before that it was Miami in 1986 and New Orleans in 1978.

Also, there was a special bridge exhibition event as part of the Olympics in Salt Lake City in 2002.

About 100 countries are expected to compete in Philadelphia.

A special draw is that unlike the World Bridge Championships in odd numbered years where pre-qualification is required for most events, most of the events in Philadelphia will be open. Also, there will be a full slate of regional rated events run parallel to the world championships, with normal ACBL masterpoint awards.
